Shared Flowers Brighten Hospitals

Pleased as punch by the generosity of Oak Bay gardeners, who donated their surplus flowers yesterday to the Colonist's "share the flowers" plan for shut-ins, are these patients in

George McDougall was one of the patients in Royal Jubilee Hospital who received flowers yesterday through the Colonist share-the-flowers scheme and the generosity of local gardeners. They were presented to him by Nurse Lily Golik, while Nurse Donna Munro selected a bunch for another patient.

More Flowers Needed Friday

Generosity of Oak Bay Gives Service Fine Start

A heart-warming response from Oak Bay gardeners made a fine success yesterday of the first collection and distribution of surplus flowers through the Colonist-organized "share the flowers" plan.

So great was the response that it was possible to deliver bouquets to patients in the Veterans' Hospital, Royal Jubilee Hospital and the Aged Women's Home.

Seth Hutton, publisher of The Daily Colonist, said the first collection had more than achieved its goal by brightening a great many sick rooms in three institutions caring for the ill and infirm.

"We are grateful for the generous response from Oak Bay and hope that the people of Fairfield and James Bay will respond just as generously on Friday," he said.

Next collection of flowers will be made Friday in Fairfield and James Bay.

Gardeners in these districts with flowers to spare are invited to phone the Colonist before 5 p.m., today or Thursday.

Bouquets of flowers—any kind, small or large—are needed. Volunteer drivers ready to offer their services in the Friday collection are invited to phone the Colonist.

Surplus flowers collected Friday will be distributed at St. Joseph's Hospital, the Victoria Nursing Home and St. Mary's Priory.

The Naval Hospital at Esquimalt and Resihaven Hospital at Sidney are also due to benefit from "share-the-flowers."

Chinese Urge Asia Bloc

LONDON (AP)—Premier Chou En-lai of Communist China called Tuesday night for a pan Asian security bloc "to safeguard the collective peace of Asia."

Chou said in an interview with Morgan Phillips, Labor Party secretary, recorded in Geneva, that Asian nations should consult among themselves and assume "obligations mutually and respectively."

Chou aimed plainly at India with references to an "area of peace," a term often used by Prime Minister Nehru. He advocated a five-point Asian peace plan paralleling exactly the five points in the India China pact on Tibet signed April 29.

Indo-China's Cease-Fire Pact Stills War Guns After 17 Years

Cambodia Truce Not Yet Settled

GENEVA (UP)—France and the Communists signed a cease-fire agreement for Viet Nam and Laos early today to end nearly eight years of war in Indo-

A similar truce agreement for Cambodia, the third Indo-Chinese state, was to have been signed at the same time but it was held up by last minute technicalities and the signing was delayed until this afternoon. The date on which the cease-fire will go into effect has not yet been disclosed. Commanders in the field will have to sign the documents first.

French Premier Pierre Mendes-France missed his midnight deadline for "peace with honor" by only two hours. He missed it by so little that he was not expected to carry out his threat to resign.

When the truce agreement goes into effect, the guns of war will be silent throughout the world for the first time in more than 17 years.

A spokesman said the cease-fire agreements came into force with the signing, but he was uncertain as to when the fighting would formally come to an end. Presumably the end would come as soon as word could be relayed to the troops in the field, a matter of three days in the Red River delta and up to two weeks in isolated districts.

COSTLY PEACE

For France, the achievement of peace was costly. France agreed to the partitioning of strife-torn Viet Nam near the 17th parallel, gave up the rich and teeming delta area with its great cities of Hanoi and Haiphong, and turned over more than 12,000,000 natives to Red rule.

But Mendes-France, in his headlong rush to end the hostilities within a month, salvaged the great Tourane air and naval base and the ancient Annamese capital of Hue, well below the cease-fire line across the 40-mile waist of Viet Nam.

The effective date of the truce was not being announced immediately, western sources said, although it was being radioed promptly to the military commands in Indo-China. The blackout of the date was said to have been imposed to prevent possible uprisings or panic among Viet Nam civilians.

Last minute snags in the Cambodian negotiations robbed Mendes-France of success by his deadline, but finally in the early morning hours it was announced that agreement in principle had been reached.

ROUGH EDGES STILL

The delegation leaders of France, Britain, Russia, Viet Nam and Cambodia huddled in emergency session at the British headquarters until after 1:30 a.m. (5:30 p.m. PDT). They hammered out a decision of sorts, with the rough edges still to be rasped off.

Finally they agreed to put off the signing of the Cambodian document until later today.

Immediately after that, the final full dress session of the Geneva conference will be held. The delegates will tie up the loose ends, and leave the final mop-up to secondary crews.

The agreements assured the end of a war which cost France and its associates 92,000 in dead and missing. In money it cost the West more than $8,000,000,000—over $2,500,000,000 of which came from the United States.

The United States held aloof from the final act in the Indo-China drama, not being a belligerent. But at the urgent behest of France not to wreck the showdown with the Reds, Washington sent Undersecretary of State Walter Bedell Smith to Geneva, and promised a commitment not to upset the Franco-Communist agreement by force or threat of force.

MAJOR DEFEAT

The French called it "peace with honor." But it set the seal on one of the worst defeats for the West at the hands of the Communists.

The signing took place in a conference room of the white marble Palace of Nations, the home of the late League of Nations.

Impact Powerful, Diplomats Feel

(From AP, UP Dispatches)

Pierre Mendes-France's Indo-China peace, achieved by sensationally unorthodox diplomacy within a matter of days, will make a powerful impact on East-West relations, Western diplomats agreed last night.

Early efforts probably will be to win sympathy for Communist China, whose attitude made peace possible, an exercise of "neutralism" in Europe and more support for Britain's lead in seeking armistice but peaceful co-existence between East and West.

The French man on the street took the news calmly, with no parades, no flags and no more than the usual crowds around newsstands. Parliament dined through a debate about cheese trademarks and cancer research.

Mendes-France may now make concessions to the United States, which stood aloof from the negotiations on West German rearmament and the European army.

Indo-China peace will mean a speedup of work on the projected Southeast Asia defense alliance.

The White House declined comment until President Eisenhower's press conference today, but leading congressmen called the truce a victory for Communism which may still have averted atomic war.

Defense Secretary Charles Wilson said the U.S. will not commit itself to defend the truce line.

Face Smashed by Blow

Powerful punch from a man he was arresting sent Constable Ray Thomas to Royal Jubilee Hospital with a smashed nose and other injuries. His attacker went to jail for one month.

Constable in Hospital

Officer's Attacker Jailed for Month

BY IAN MacDONALD

City policeman Ray Thomas lay in a Royal Jubilee Hospital bed last night wondering what doctors are going to do to repair his badly shattered nose.

The pain was concentrated on the left side of his face, for the fist that fractured his nose also completely closed his left eye.

He may also be suffering a skull injury. Constable Thomas is the third city policeman to be assaulted while on duty during the last two months, and the most seriously injured.

Earlier in the day he heard Magistrate H. C. Hall sentence 30-year-old Robert Malby of 878 Esquimalt Road to one month in jail for the attack.

Constable Thomas sat in the witness box facing his tall assailant, whose shirt and trousers were covered with blood, and told his story in a shaky voice.

TELLS OF CALL

He stated that at 1:30 a.m. Tuesday he responded to a call to 1332 Broughton Avenue where a man was reported to be bothering the residents.

"I checked the accused in his car outside and he gave me his identification," said Constable Thomas.

"I asked him where he lived and he said right there. He got out of his car and started up toward the house and said, 'Come on in, I will show you.'"

The policeman said the accused rang the doorbell, and the door was opened by his wife from whom he has been separated for three months.

ARGUED OVER MONEY

Malby was told by his wife that she did not want to see him any more and they argued about the amount of money to be paid for the support of their child, said the officer.

Outright Purchase Threatened

Toronto Escapes Rich American

TORONTO (CP)—A New York millionaire was taken home by his relatives Tuesday after threatening to carry out drastic changes in Toronto's city government.

His luxury car got him involved in a small property damage accident. He didn't like the way police spoke to him so he decided to run for mayor and fire the lot.

Patient police, who did not disclose his name, said he would have to become a property owner to hold civic office. So he said he would buy a large hotel.

For his mayoralty campaign, the man—who conducted his business clad in a sailor cap—said he would need the backing of the press. So he tried to buy The Telegram.

He didn't like his final meal at a downtown hotel in Toronto. So his last shot was an attempt to buy the hotel in order to fire the chef.

"He's got enough money to do just that," said police, as the New York family led him away.

All They Lacked Was Custard Pie

Gendarmes Face Keystone Tangle

PARIS (UPI)—The events Tuesday night in the Rue de Beaure might have been lifted directly from one of Mack Sennett's Keystone Cops comedies.

The scenario: Jean Lafarge, hungry, rushed into a tiny restaurant waving a pistol and demanding "Give me your money or I'll shoot."

Owner Marcel Renard refused. Lafarge, man of his word, fired. Renard slumped to the floor, a bullet wound in his neck.

Lafarge man of action, raved into the street for a getaway. He failed to notice an approaching car, was knocked down—and out.

The driver, unaware of the holdup, called police. As they began investigating the accident, Rene Valjean rounded the corner into the Rue de Beaure, brandishing a pistol and chased by half a dozen citizens.

Valjean, hot tempered lover, had brawled with his girl in another restaurant nearby, threatened everyone in the place with his gun before backing down the street in retreat.

Valjean backed into the swarming police and bystanders at the scene of the auto accident.

Confusion reigned. Gallic tempers flared. The harassed cops ordered everyone at the scene held until they could untangle the tangled situation.

That made it a 90-minute feature production.

Beaver Quits Papers

LONDON (Reuters)—Lord Beaverbrook, a Canadian-born newspaper magnate who built up The Daily Express from a small newspaper to one of Britain's most popular dailies, has relinquished control of it and its associated papers.

An announcement from The Express office said Tuesday night:

"Lord Beaverbrook has given a block of shares in the Express to the Beaverbrook Foundation which has been established as a British Empire educational trust.

"The newspapers, have therefore passed out of his control."

Lord Beaverbrook, born at Maple, Ont., is 75. The newspapers he controlled include The Daily Express with a daily circulation of more than 4,000,000; The Sunday Express, a national Sunday newspaper founded by him; The Evening Standard, a London evening paper; and the Glasgow Evening Citizen.

The Express, one of Britain's foremost journalistic exponents of Anglo-American harmony, under Lord Beaverbrook's guidance pressed even more strongly for solidarity within the British Commonwealth and territories.

Lord Beaverbrook came to England from Canada in 1910 and formed the London Express Newspapers, Ltd., in 1915.

He bought control of the Daily Express in 1918 at a time when it was described by some people as "a rather shaky property" and by others as "moribund."

He lifted the paper from a loss of $200,000 a year to its present mammoth circulation. Striking success was also achieved with The Evening Standard and The Sunday Express.

In 1948 he announced that he was retiring from active interest in his newspapers—but he still gave close, continuous personal attention to their affairs.

Minister Resigns

LONDON (Reuters)—Sir Thomas Dugdale, minister of agriculture in Prime Minister Churchill's Conservative government, today announced he had handed in his resignation following a controversy over civil service "bureaucracy" in his department.

Assailant Jailed After Smashing Constable's Nose

He managed to muster a laugh for a photographer's crack during a recent six-week training course, he must have missed the lesson on how to duck.

Yesterday it was learned from the attorney general's department that the recent assault on Constable Thomas was the first of its kind since the war.

"Suddenly the accused turned and struck me in the eye and nose," said the constable. "After a struggle the accused broke away and left in a car," said Constable Thomas.

All police cars in the district were alerted when the officer radioed back to the station from his own car about the assault.

Maltby was arrested by Saanich police who stopped his car on Burton Avenue.

The accused had nothing to say in court.

While Constable Thomas was giving evidence, a phone call was received at the police station asking that he return to the hospital.

He went to the hospital immediately afterward and was ordered to bed.

Crown Prosecutor Alan Bigelow said that in September, 1949, Maltby was fined $25 for obstructing the police.

Magistrate Hall said in passing sentence that in the last case of a policeman being assaulted it seemed to him "just a case of a struggle with a young fellow being put in a patrol wagon."

"This is an entirely different and uncalled for matter, causing a serious and unpleasant injury," he told Maltby.

Constable Thomas, who joined the city police four years ago, said in hospital he saw the punch coming when it was only about six inches away.

Mr. Wickens, who came here with J. J. O'Brien, vice-president, to meet members of the Victoria Unit No. 12, is a member and former official of the World Veterans' Federation. The federation was founded

He added, "it is helping ease world tension" on a "behind-the-scenes" basis.

Last year, he said, the federation "may have helped avoid fighting over Trieste." The situation between Yugoslavia and Italy over the territory was very ticklish, when troops were suddenly withdrawn.

Mr. Wickens said they left two days after the WVF "drafted" leaders of the Yugoslav and Italian veterans' groups as vice-presidents and "got them to pledge themselves to a solution."

"They saw their governments and the trouble eased. I'm not sure they did it themselves, but they certainly helped," he said. The federation which has 22,000,000 members from 26 nations, has also helped ease tension between Israel and Arab states, and between Pakistan and India over Kashmir.

"We found all men think the same way and want the same things... and our leadership made a big impression on the European countries."

Truce in Indo-China

THE cease-fire arranged at Geneva between principals on the one hand and a group of United Nations members with the formal exclusion of the United States on the other, may be a political victory for Premier Mendès-France in his own country, but it seems also to involve a complex and continuing problem for the free nations of the world. The partition of Indo-China at the 17th Parallel, with elections to follow in two years' time, forms a rather bleak comparison with what happened in Korea, with the full assent of the United States. In both instances Communist diplomacy appears to have edged western nations into a negative, if tenable, position.

It is true that the fighting has ceased, but it is far from certain that the truce in Indo-China promises much more than a long drawn out contention, with civil unrest internally and extra-mural agitation or encouragement into the bargain. The effort to compose dissidents by partitioning the country, and by segregation into like groups, as in Laos and Cambodia, may stand until there is a general election. What would be most probable then would be a renewal of the factional discord in all of its sub-surface violence.

It may be, however, that the cease-fire agreement in the terms written was the only form of compromise that could have been written at Geneva in the present political temper of the world. The fact that Anthony Eden maintained to the very end every possible effort to bring about a workable solution indicates that Great Britain, while not cutting out from the discussions, was by no means happy over the anticipated result. As matters stand, the United Nations becomes the sponsor of the truce agreement, with the United States in dissent.

France through her new premier made it very delicate for western nations to intervene. Her position regarding colonization, self-governance, protection from external attack and so forth in her overseas possessions, has of late not been one of strength.

Someone's Tax Dollar

SOON after he took over from Hon. Brooke Claxton the ministry of defense, Hon. Ralph Campney made an epigram which deserves to be displayed in gold letters in every government office in the country. It was this: "Every dollar is a dollar, and it is also someone's tax dollar." It was the perfect retort, unconscious no doubt, to the rhetorical question put some years before by Hon. C. D. Howe when he dismissed discussion of an item of federal expenditure with a nonchalant "What is a million dollars?"

Mr. Campney has taken charge of a department which annually spends almost as much money as all others put together. He has promised to review the defense program in the hope of finding ways of making economies, and there should be several places in which he can put his own slogan to work. Despite repeated assurances that every dollar is wisely spent, there has been in recent years enough evidence of duplication, extravagance and waste to suggest that Mr. Campney will be able to find what he is seeking.

It is not only in his department, however, that the origin of the millions spent daily by the government appears sometimes to be forgotten. Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports show that at March 31 last there were 6,109 more civil servants on the federal payroll than a year ago. That increase is in marked contrast to the situation in the United States where the government in the last 18 months has eliminated 216,000 unnecessary jobs, for a saving of almost $1,000,000,000 a year.

So it is not only Mr. Campney but for the new minister of finance, Mr. Harris, as well as to look for economies. The estimates approved for this fiscal year might be a good place to start. There are in them many items which invite the new minister's scrutiny. To take just one: publicity. The defense department expects to spend at the rate of $6,835 a day for that purpose, over and above the salaries of its public relations personnel. Under a policy of voluntary recruitment to the forces some expenditure on publicity may be inescapable, though the total seems high. But against the defense department's $6,835, other departments of government propose to spend at the rate of $20,570 a day for "publicity," this again being in addition to salaries and also to telegrams and telephones, used extensively in publicity programs, but shown separately.

Mr. Harris might inquire why non-defense branches of government need $20,570 a day to publicize themselves; why in fact they need publicity at all, since they are not there to sell anything but to do a quiet and efficient job of administration. If many of the specimens that flood newspaper offices can be taken as examples, the publicity experts are wasting money, each dollar of which in the words of Mr. Campney is someone's tax dollar.

A Glimpse Only

DETAILS of the motor car passages of the Duke of Edinburgh through city and municipal streets during his brief visit have now been released, listing the routes to be taken and the approximate times. Four trips in all are scheduled, although only as incidental journeying. None of them is designed to give the public chance to see much of the Royal visitor beyond a fleeting glimpse as the duke's car moves at normal traveling speed. No special slowing-down concession, such as might permit citizens to demonstrate their welcome, is planned.

There will be some disappointment about this. It would have been allayed had the Duke's forthcoming tour of Canada been of the informal nature originally announced, but since then various ceremonies and much official handshaking have been arranged. This being so it seems a pity that on at least one of the passages along Greater Victoria streets the Royal cavalcade could not have been scheduled at a slower pace. The Duke is a very popular and personable individual, and citizens as a whole are anxious to see him and give expression to the pleasure his visit gives them. Were it left to the Duke himself one doubts he would object to five or ten minutes being added to a brief passage through town.

Fortunately the RCN is doing what it can to make up for the restricted public opportunity to see His Royal Highness. The main item on his program here, one that is characteristic since he is a sailor himself, is his visit to the Esquimalt naval base. This includes a ceremonial inspection and display at the Naden playing field, and in a fine gesture the RCN is arranging for the accommodation of as many of the public as possible. The number will of necessity be limited, but for those present it will afford the close view that all Victorians would like to have of their Royal guest.

Interpreting the News

Munich—With a Difference

BY J. M. ROBERTS, JR.
Associated Press News Analyst

THE decision at Geneva to partition Viet Nam has many parallels with the decision at Munich which gave Czechoslovakia to Hitler.

Overwhelming in the long run was the hard fact that the free world was not in position to wage an all-out defense of Indo-China without running the grave risk of a general war and a general war in Asia was the last thing it was in a position to undertake.

When Russia was found to have mobilized a powerful expeditionary force too near Japan, choices had to be made which were just as bitter as the choices given France and Britain in 1938.

One vital difference between the allied position then and now is in the allies' plans for southeast Asia.

When Neville Chamberlain returned to London in 1938 he spoke publicly of "peace in our time" but his "umbrella salute" was to become the symbol of retreat, and an invitation to new Hitler aggression.

Privately, Chamberlain was saying with determination that Czechoslovakia was the last retreat. He permitted publication of the thought. But Britain and France would not make it official, and Hitler went ahead with his plans for Poland. As a result, mankind poured out more of its blood and dissipated more of its riches than it ever had in a like case before.

In those days, Britain and France clung to the hope that Hitler would keep a bargain.

Now the allies are dealing with an enemy which has demonstrated it will not keep a bargain. Britain, France and the United States are reported agreed that they must now go ahead in southeast Asia with a twin of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Where Britain and France, hoping, would not express official and public doubt of Hitler's good faith, the western allies now are expressing it openly with regard to the Communists.

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes—and ships—and sailing wax—of cabbages and kings"

By TOM TAYLOR

WRITING to the Wall Street Journal an Illinois man is wroth because on a television program the U.S. secretary of the treasury used the word "America" 17 times instead of the words "United States."

He complains too that President Eisenhower, his cabinet, editors and public men everywhere constantly refer to "America" when they mean the United States.

And he thinks this term of reference is offensive to "our northern neighbors."

True enough it is of course that the U.S. has appropriated the word America to its own exclusive use, but the practice is old and time weathered by now and I doubt that many Canadians have any objections.

Geographically Canada is part of America but the Illinois man needn't lose any sleep on our behalf.

It's true too that the Spaniards objected to this label being pinned on North America on the basis of a map which purported to show that Amerigo Vespucci had reached the South American mainland before Columbus reached North America, but that was long ago. They gave in 200 years ago.

The proper name of our closest neighbor is the United States of America, stemming from the terminology of the Declaration of Independence, but the fact is that before 1776 the original 13 states were recognized as the "American Colonies" of Britain. So while perhaps U.S. politicians have a penchant for overdoing the use of the word "America," especially when they are talking about themselves among themselves, the habit is long founded.

People turn to a handy, easy-sounding name to describe themselves. It is simple for citizens of Canada to call themselves Canadians; and I don't really know what name other than Americans our neighbors could adopt.

Perhaps the signers of the Declaration of Independence should have looked ahead, but as the song has it they would be doing what came naturally. The Declaration employs both "States" and "Colonies" in describing the woes which gave it birth, so apparently both terms were current among the American colonists. The confederate fathers named themselves as representatives of "The United States of America" when they announced their independence to the world.

Among the colonists use of the word "American" would be in vogue even then, if only as a necessary distinction from things of their Mother Country of that period.

Anyway what can our neighbors call themselves if they don't appropriate the term "American." "United Statesian" would be meaningless as well as a queer mouthful, and "United Stateser" would be even less felicitous, and while this is the age of initials I don't think U.S.A. could be comfortable turned into "Usaian."

Usage usually confers respectability on a term, as per the dictionary for example, and the world has long been used to thinking of the U.S.A. as America, and of citizens of that republic as Americans. It seems pedantic and pointless to raise any objection at this late date.

Latin Americans have also long since ceased to take umbrage. Brazilians don't speak of themselves as South Americans, as in geographical fact they are. Nor do Peruvians or Chileans cite their nationality in this guise. Their countries have a specific name unlike all others—the U.S.A. adopted a generic title.

Having done so it was automatic that "American" would become the name by which the people of the U.S.A. would be known. Although the use of the term 12 times in one speech is perhaps rather redundant, International Commentary...

Rocking the Congress Boat

By J. G. HAYDEN, from Washington

NOT the least of President Eisenhower's burdens is a Senate Republican floor leader—Knowland—devoted much more to attempted guidance of the State Department and threats of reprisal against foreign nations than to steering the legislative ship.

Knowland won big headlines for himself, here and abroad, by vowing to resign his leadership if Communism should be admitted to the United Nations. New he is maneuvering for attachment to the pending $3,368,000 foreign aid authorization a declaration of intention to shut off all United States contributions for United Nations support if that body should acknowledge the indisputable fact of the Peiping government's rule of all China.

Still another device advanced by Knowland is a joint resolution by both houses of Congress declaring that UN admission of Communist China would constitute "appeasement."

It is nothing unusual for just ordinary senators, even of the President's party, thus to strive to take over business of the executive branch. But assumption of that role by the one man the President has to depend on most to get his measures through is a decided administrative handicap. And this is the case especially in the last days of a congressional session when the most difficult features of the President's program always are at stake.

Aside from his supposed spokesmanship for the President on Capitol Hill, Knowland's outburst is remarkable for two reasons. First, President Eisenhower, Secretary of State J. Foster Dulles, and the U.S. delegate at the UN, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., are as firmly committed against admission of Communist China to the UN—now and for the foreseeable future as anybody could be.

Second, the question of change in Chinese representation in the UN's most important body, the General Assembly, cannot come up until the Assembly meets next September, and probably will not be seriously considered then unless a great change in Communist Chinese attitude has been evidenced in the meantime.

The crucial testing ground is Indo-China. If there is achieved through the peace agreement reasonable assurance by China and Russia that Communism will not attempt to advance further in Asia maybe nothing the U.S. can do will prevent the two-thirds Assembly vote required to make Communist China one of its members.

If, on the other hand, the Communists maintain their aggressive posture to the extent of refusing to give a satisfactory guarantee against new ventures in Southeast Asia, many of the nations now urging admission of China are likely to change sides.

The greatest single liability for U.S. negotiators, charged with keeping Communist China out of the UN, is a rising feeling all around the world, engendered by Knowland and other hotheads, that America is determined either to run the whole show or refuse to play.

Never heretofore has the U.S. failed to carry with it a majority of the UN Assembly on any issue of importance, much less the just over one-third required to defeat admission of an applicant for membership.

But continuance of that support is not certain.

Some of our heretofore firm backers in Central and South America have evidenced displeasure over events in Guatemala. The Arab States are disgruntled by what they regard as American siding with Israel and mixing too much in affairs of Iran and Egypt. Britain and India between them have weaned a scattering of nations all around the world in the direction of Chinese Communist recognition.

There are two sides to the issue of the Chinese representation in the UN—first the fitness of the Peiping government; second, eligibility of the present occupant, Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist regime on Formosa.

In his contention that Communist China proved by its Korean aggression that it is not a "peace loving" state, such as the UN charter requires, Secretary Dulles was on solid ground. But it is not so easy to establish why the Formosan government, wholly removed from the China mainland, should continue to be recognized as ruler over the population of that vast territory.

One tactical course that objectors to the present status are known to have discussed is to begin with a motion to shift the Chiang Kai-shek delegate to what he is in fact, representative solely of the Formosan government, thereby opening the Chinese seat to whoever may prove rightful and realistic occupant.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

A CHINESE gourmet has been giving me some tips on Chinese food.

"Always go in to a Chinese restaurant when they are busy," he says. "Then the pans are all hot, all the cooks are up on their feet, alert and busy. One of the secrets of Chinese cooking at its best is the speed with which it is cooked in piping hot pans. If you go into a Chinese restaurant at off-hours, the fires are low, the pans are cold. The cooks are half asleep on their chairs. One of the great talents of the Chinese is their capacity to relax. If there is nothing to do, they do it with the utmost relaxation. It therefore takes a little time to rouse a cook and get him hopping with his pots and pans. He is liable to send you out your chosen dish without that quality or zip that comes of speed and red hot utensils."

Chinese food looks soggy; but no food in the world seems to lie so lightly in the innards. You can stuff yourself on chow-mien, chicken sweet or sour, breaded shrimps, fried Chinese greens and boiled rice until your belt band hurts and you have trouble getting in under the wheel of your car to drive home. If you distended yourself on any other food imaginable to the same condition, you would be through eating for days, like a boa constrictor. But Chinese food seems to vanish into your system an hour or two after eating, you are without remorse, very comfortable, and partial to soft music.

"Food," said my Chinese gourmet, "determines the character of the eater. We Asians can readily see the effects of beef and pudding on the British, ham and eggs on the Americans, pickles and cabbage and weird wursts on the Germans, over-complicated and over-cooked food on the French. You all spend too much time preparing the food and too little time consuming it. The secret of Chinese food lies in the little time it takes to prepare and the long time it takes to consume."

He handed me chopsticks, and we were one hour and 12 minutes getting to the bursting point.

Trade and the Curtain

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

CONVICTION in a British court of five men on charges of smuggling copper and brass behind the Iron Curtain is a reminder that although the British government has been frankly interested in promoting East-West trade, it has also been punctilious in observing the agreed bans on strategic materials exports.

Frequently this conscientiousness has caused attacks on the government by Britons who have felt that London's enforcement of regulations has put British businessmen at a disadvantage with traders in other European countries. For example, one reliable spokesman for the businessman's point of view stated that he had seen being laid in a Far Eastern country cables of European manufacture.

Herbert Hoover has called for "patience, tolerance and understanding" in world affairs. Excellent advice, except that so many appear eager to jump all over the other fellow if he isn't patient, tolerant and understanding fast enough to suit us.

A wise motorist never shouts at another. "Why don't you learn to drive, you stupid little so-and-so," without first making sure that the second adjective is applicable.

Iceland has a modified form of prohibition on her statute books. Restaurants cannot sell wine or other intoxicating drinks, whose sale is restricted to stores and bars. Also, in each region the citizens must elect a special law-enforcement officer whose function is to insure the observance of this "divorcement" regulation. Recently the central authorities discovered that in one county only 100 persons had been elected to the job.

"This will hurt me more than you," said Wesley Orr of Portsmouth as he was about to give a spanking to his son. He was right. A few minutes later he was taken to hospital with a dislocated shoulder.

"So you are a hundred years old," said the visitor to the oldest inhabitant. "To what do you attribute your long life?"

"The weather," replied the old man. "It's enough to put years on anyone."

Tory Split Wider; Rival Groups Plan To Field Own Men

The rift in B.C. Conservative ranks grew wider yesterday as both pro-Drew and anti-Drew forces laid plans for fielding candidates in the next federal election.

Tom MacDonald, president of the B.C. Progressive Conservative Association, said from Vancouver that his association would continue to operate as a B.C. federation and if necessary would field federal candidates.

At the same time, federal members Howard Green and David Fulton and Mr. Drew's personal B.C. representative, Les Bewley, met yesterday in Vancouver with a view to forming a new Tory federal association, to draw its authority from the Conservative party of Canada.

Maj.-Gen. Pearkes, VC, MP, one of the three B.C. Conservative members to disassociate themselves from the B.C. association after Saturday's non-confidence motion in George Drew, said yesterday it was "childish" for the rebel body to think it can field federal candidates who would not be recognized by the national body.

TORY AGAINST TORY
The development could mean that in every B.C. federal riding, Tory would be running against Tory—Finlayson Independent Conservative against Drew Conservative.

Mr. MacDonald called the proposed federal organization a "George Drew Association" which would be formed by "a small clique of federal Conservatives in the province who have attempted to divide the party."

Deane Finlayson said from Vancouver yesterday that the Conservative party has been "divided, leaderless and frustrated in the province" because the national body had given up in the provincial field.

"This federal clique has done everything to frustrate us in our efforts to revive the party's fortunes in the province," he said. "We have a situation where one man wants to be leader, party and principal, and no leader can set himself above the party. The accumulation of past mistakes and expediency in B.C. has finally caught up with us."

Mr. MacDonald said the pro-Drew faction which disassociated itself from the B.C. association yesterday was "a group of men who want to be leader, party and principal, and no leader can set himself above the party. The accumulation of past mistakes and expediency in B.C. has finally caught up with us."

Greek Beauty Praises Dulles

NEW YORK (UPI)—The most beautiful girl in Greece arrived here Tuesday praising Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Rica Dialina, 21-year-old artist from Crete, flashed her dark eyes and smiled when she spoke of Dulles for until he stepped into the picture, she was barred from the United States—and from entry in the "Miss Universe" contest in Long Beach, Calif., which begins tonight.

She was denied admission because she did the illustration for the cover of a book of poetry allegedly written by a Communist. Another girl was chosen to enter the contest in her place and already had arrived, but she bowed out of the contest gracefully when she heard Rica was on her way, saying: "I am glad Miss Dialina is coming here. She is the official Miss Greece and of course I'm withdrawing."

Brothers Busy Chinning After 31 Years Apart

BY BRUCE LOWTHER

Wyman MacKechnie, president of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association, came to Victoria this week for a rest. But he's not resting much. In the daytime, Mr. MacKechnie, 57, is visiting farmers of southern Vancouver Island; and at night, he visits old friends and talks all night with his brother.

Mr. MacKechnie and his brother, Milton, 70, of 2549 Roseberry Avenue, haven't seen each other for 31 years.

Both agree they have "done plenty since to talk about," but instead most of the yarns are about their boyhood in the district around Hull, Que.

For instance, they come from a farming community, Wyman, Que., named after their grandfather, a descendant of the wife of Philomen Wright, who founded Hull.

That proves, they say, "there are a lot of us MacKechnies and Wyman back there."

The visitor is touring Ayrshire cattle breeders in all parts of Canada and is visiting B.C. for the first time. Owner of a 400-acre Hull district farm and 80 purebred Ayrshires himself, he admits he's "greatly impressed" by the Ayrshire cattle in B.C.

Reading about old times with his brother Milton of Victoria is Wyman MacKechnie, left, president of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association. The two met here this week for the first time in 31 years when the Quebec brother made his first visit to B.C.

Mr. MacKechnie says the cattle have set some of the best production records in Canada.

His host and brother, Milton, moved to the prairies 39 years ago. He has been here for 11 years and is a maintenance

The campaign for a six-day shopping week in Victoria may run into trouble soon.

A special meeting of the tourist trade group of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Friday, may refer the matter to the retail merchants' group in the chamber, where there is said to be considerable opposition to the plan.

It is understood the tourist trade group feels chamber members who oppose the plan should be given a chance to speak their views, before the issue is referred to the whole chamber and later to city council.

Will Serve in Venture Plan Navy Ketch Sailing Here from Halifax

The naval sailing yacht HMCS Oriole IV will sail from Halifax for Esquimalt Thursday and should reach here early in October. She will be used for seamanship training of cadets under the navy's new "Venture" plan of officer training.

The Oriole IV was commissioned at HMC Dockyard, Halifax, on Monday and is the second sailing ship in Canadian naval history to bear the prefix "HMCS."

The 90-foot ketch was built in the United States in 1921, and was first connected with the Canadian navy as a sea-cadet training ship on the Great Lakes. Later she served at the navy's new-entry base at Cornwallis, N.S., and at Halifax.

The Venture training scheme will open at Esquimalt in September.

PREDECESSOR
The navy's first commissioned sailing ship was a three-masted schooner, HMCS Venture, after which the new "stone frigate" here is named. The venture burned and sank off the Newfoundland coast.

The Oriole IV is one of several big yachts which have been used for some time for naval training on the East Coast.

Honeymoon Planned In Victoria

An English couple who were sweethearts half a century ago but have not seen each other for the last 30 years are on their way here to celebrate their honeymoon.

Mrs. Eliza Mills of Kamsack, Sask., and William H. Stockley of Winnipeg, both 79, were married Friday at Stony Mountain, Man., the home of Mrs. Mills' sister.

The couple went together in England and then broke up and each got married. However, they continued to write after they had both moved to Canada. Six years ago Mrs. Mills' husband died and three years ago Mr. Stockley lost his wife. Stony Mountain is 15 miles north of Winnipeg.

News of the Albernis Vandalism Hits Church

PORT ALBERNI—Petty theft and vandalism have threatened a long-standing tradition of St. Alban's Anglican Church here.

Recent incidents have resulted in consideration being given to locking St. Alban's at night.

Rev. G. H. Greenhalgh said it is with reluctance that it has been necessary to give thought to abandoning the "open door" policy in connection with the new church building at Fifth Avenue and Mar Street.

An electric vacuum cleaner disappeared recently and a money box was rifled after the padlock was torn off.

A puzzling feature of the occurrences was the theft of a metal ventilation grate from the concrete foundation of the building.

New member of the Turtle Club is Lolly Badesso, faller at Spruce Lake Logging Division here.

A new hard hat was credited with saving Badesso's life when it deflected an eight-foot limb which was thrown 35 feet in the air by a falling tree, then descended to bounce on Badesso's hat.

A small hole in the hat and a slight scalp wound resulted. Just 24 hours earlier, W. J. Loukes, general foreman, and A. D. Vernon, bull header, had noticed that Badesso was wearing a defective hard hat and advised him to turn it in on a new one.

Brig. Hector Nyerod, who established the Salvation Army Corps in Port Alberni two years ago and who has been officer-in-charge since, will conduct his farewell meetings here August 1.

The brigadier has been appointed prison and police officer for Vancouver. His successor in Port Alberni has not yet been announced.

He will take up his new duties August 3 and will be accompanied to Vancouver by Mrs. Nyerod and his daughter, Esther.

Cliff Lee and Einar Olson will be official Port Alberni Elks delegates to the national convention at Penitence July 25, 26 and 27.

Also going from this district will be Mr. and Mrs. K. D. Robinson. Mr. Robinson is president of the provincial Elks' organization, and Mrs. Robinson will attend as a delegate from the Port Alberni lodge of the Order of the Royal Purple.

Other ORP delegates will be Mrs. Ted Gunnarud and Mrs. C. M. Tassie. Mrs. Cliff Lee will attend as district deputy.

Council Faces Property Claim

A claim connected with sale of lots in Alberni's new subdivision was received at council meeting Monday night and referred to the city solicitor.

The account, totaling $1,092.88 was submitted by Harold Law of Alberni, who said in a covering letter that he had been informed the two lots in Block 7 at Tebo and Vandaeur Streets were city property and that he had made application for their purchase, paying $25 down on the property.

Mr. Law said he was told that title would be forthcoming and that he could enter the property and start construction, later learning at the city hall that the lots had been tax delinquent and that they could still be redeemed until September of this year.

Mr. Law's claim was based on the $25 he had paid on the property, expenses of blowing stumps, etc., $92.63; wages for 75 hours spent in clearing, $117.75; plans, $37.50; writing specifications for construction and working with contractor on estimates, $200; estimated rental resulting from inability to go ahead with the project, $600.

A suggestion for financing improvements to Greenwood Cemetery was contained in a letter from an Ontario couple visiting in Alberni, read at council meeting Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McColl offered the opinion that an assessment of 50 cents a year on all adults in the district could be used to beautify the cemetery. It was suggested that, with the attractive setting of Greenwood, it could be made to equal the Bulchard Gardens in beauty.

Apart from labor, expenditure to improve the appearance of Greenwood would be negligible, the letter said.

Mr. and Mrs. McColl expressed a high opinion of the scenery in the Alberni Valley.

T. S. Barnett, MP, Mrs. Barnett and their children, Nancy and Paul, left by car Saturday for Edmonton, where Mr. Barnett will attend the national CCF convention during the last week in July.

William Moore, Courtenay MLA, will be official delegate from Comox-Alberni constituency.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnett returned last week from Gabriola Island where the MP was one of the lecturers at the CCF summer seminar.

Alberni council Monday night approved five applications for building permits totaling $33,125. In two cases however, approval was subject to signature of the sanitary inspector.

Nursing Home Estimate $65,676

Cost to the community of a 53-bed nursing home for senior citizens was estimated at approximately $65,676, plus half the cost of the site, in a communication from a firm of Vancouver architects passed on to Alberni council by Alberni Valley Memorial Home Society.

The society is interested in providing a nursing home in the district, and had already taken steps to interest councils of both cities in the project.

Received with a letter from E. T. Cox, president of the society, the information was ordered filed, as information until a general meeting is called by the society, probably in September.

Compliments on the condition of the local airstrip were received in a letter from the Aircraft Owners' and Pilots' Association of Seattle to Port Alberni and District Chamber of Commerce.

The letter made special mention of the fact that the strip is considered to be very well marked.

A group of 14 planes recently visited here from Seattle, and the secretary of the association said that following their experience on the Alberni field, the flight will be recommended to other members.

Local pilots are responsible for maintenance of the field, while MacMillan & Blodell officials have taken charge of the markings.

A copy of the letter will be passed on to the company.

Sea Cadets of the RSCC Alberni will be at the naval base at Esquimalt when the Duke of Edinburgh visits it August 2.

It is anticipated the navy will provide special transportation for the corps from Port Alberni, possibly on August 1. Plans are being made for a 100-axel guard of honor from the various Vancouver Island corps. The duke is admiral of the Sea Cadets.

Tourists Fewer; Improvement Due

Cold unsettled weather in British Columbia continues to keep tourist traffic totals slightly below those of 1953. Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Chetwynd, said yesterday.

Total number of vehicle entry permits by the end of June this year was 100,595 compared with 103,752 last year. Figures show a drop in June, Quebec and Ontario dropped 13 per cent and 8 per cent below their 1953 June totals, while B.C. went down 3.2 per cent.

Mr. Chetwynd expressed confidence that the British Empire Games at Vancouver, July 30 to August 7, followed by the Florence Chadwick strait swim at Victoria would boost July and August figures to record heights.

LEGION PICNIC
SHAWNIGAN LAKE—A caravan of five cars left Shawnigan Lake at 11 a.m. Sunday, carrying members of the ladies' auxiliary to Malahat Branch No. 134, Canadian Legion, and their families to Ivy Green Park, Ladysmith. This was the first Legion picnic in many years.

Mrs. G. Stibwell, Mrs. J. Davidson and Mrs. M. Sutton were in charge of arrangements with Legionnaires assisting.

VISITING RELATIVES
SHAWNIGAN LAKE—Mrs. Verne Lindstrom, Portland, Ore., her daughter, Mrs. G. Strom, and Dianne and Susan Strom, are guests of Mrs. Strom's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Clarke, Old Victoria Road.

Also visiting Mr. and Mrs. Clarke is Mrs. Clarke's sister-in-law, Mrs. Bay Schulz of Edmonton.

CHANGES MADE
SHAWNIGAN LAKE—Very few of the early residents of Shawnigan Lake would recognize the modern Shawnigan Resort with its 250 feet of waterfrontage as the former summer home of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Fox, Victoria.

Mr. Fox built the main house in 1902. Practically surrounded by thick bush and tall trees, it was scarcely noticeable from the road until the late W. Eddele started clearing the property for an auto court about the beginning of the Second World War.

The resort is ideally situated close to the highway and water at the north end of the lake. The two small cabins have been gradually replaced with six fully modern cabins, and extensive improvements to the grounds and beach have been made this summer by the new owners, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. South.

Barbecue Fires Ready To Light, Sooke's All Set for Big Day

BY FLORENCE ACREMAN

SOKE. The fires have been laid for the famed All-Sooke Day feast of barbecued salmon and huge hunks of beef. They will be lighted Friday the night before the outdoor celebration.

Sooke Community Association members, friends and other volunteer workers who "get a kick out of helping steer All-Sooke Day to a grand finish," have long since learned to manage the festival with finesse.

Filing of past data since the great day was started in 1931, and good management all round, are reasons for the continued financial brightness, but the community's zest for the day itself inspires every resident to do his part well.

Parking space is better than ever this year. Underbrush has been cleared and sawdust has been used to fill in some damp spots.

BELL WAITS
The 85-foot spar tree has been raised. A trio of strong cables holds it in place and the bell on top is waiting for Danny Sailor, world high-rigger champion, to scamper up and ring it before he drops down to the sawdust below, perhaps to break another record.

Part of the fun of preparing for All-Sooke Day will take place Friday evening in Sooke Community Hall when 90 yards of bread will be sandwiched to help provide refreshments for the expected throng of 12,000.

There is no admission to Sooke River Flats, nor to seats in the huge grandstands on either side of the double tracks.

SUNSHINE PROMISED
The weather always cooperates with All-Sooke Day proceedings, logging sports and midway entertainments. As the sun shines and planes soar overhead, no one would suspect that the past spring's freshet brought the Sooke River waters whirling down over the flats, half submerging the grandstands and almost providing enough depth for the trout to eat off the barbecue tables.

Families generally arrive in the early morning of the big day in the lovely Sooke district. Clean grass, lots of space, hot water for tea make for a pleasant family outing as picnic baskets are unpacked and supplemented with supplies from a store on the grounds.

For the wind-up dance in Sooke Community Hall, Charlie Hunt's orchestra will start playing at 8:30 p.m. This early time allows the people to come from the flats right in the dance, where the All-Sooke Day queen will be crowned.

PARKSVILLE—Keen competition made some good names when Parksville Loggers met Campbell River Cougars in doubleheader exhibition baseball games at Parksville.

Parksville won the afternoon game 10-7 with Bob Prior pitching all nine innings.

Campbell River won the evening game 8-7.

Home runs were made by Vern Ferguson for Campbell River and for Parksville by Ron Grey, Bob Prior and Jack Messner.

East was furious. "You should have shifted to a club," he told West. "Then, when you won the first diamond trick with the king you could have led another club and I would have had a club trick before declarer could establish his diamonds. That would have been four-tricks and we'd have saved the game."

Car of Dynamite Fails to Explode

PAYETTE, Idaho (AP)—Ten boxcars of an eastbound Union Pacific freight train, one loaded with dynamite, were demolished Sunday when a broken journal wrecked part of the train in the yards here. No one was injured.

The wreck tore up about 100 feet of track and scattered wreckage over a wide area. The dynamite-laden car did not explode.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

While sports editor Jim Tang is on holiday, a series of guest columns will appear under the heading "It Beats Me." Today's column is by Harry Young, former golf and soccer writer in the United Kingdom who is now business editor of The Daily Colonist.

BY HARRY YOUNG

The other day I had the pleasure of walking over the Victoria Golf course at Oak Bay with Harry R. Orr, a Scottish amateur golf internationalist of quite a few years back.

surprise to meet him because he had been a charter member and the Scottish Golf Union representative of one of the golf courses in Scotland of which I used to be a member.

Harry was impressed with the layout and general condition of the course, and remarked casually that the shots to some of the greens would demand "considerable stop."

When I pointed out that such clubs as wedges, dynameters and blasters did the job without great difficulty, he professed an utter disdain for such modern contrivances and declared he would ban their use, especially from the fairway, if he had his way.

This struck me as an interesting thought and one which opens up a tremendous field for discussion not only on modern golf, but other games, whose entire complexion has been changed by altered equipment and technique.

To most of us, golf is not an easy game. It is a perpetual challenge even with all the refinements of the longer carrying ball, the matched-set of clubs, and the tool for every occasion. But for the top-flight performers it has become more and more mechanical.

To meet the challenge of the long-flying ball, golf course architects have added yardage, stretched out traps and tightened greens, but despite that I firmly believe that even for the long and middle-handicap player, it is easier today to collect a few pars on the round than it was with old equipment and shorter courses.

Once a golfer learns how to use one of those fierce recovery tools, which Harry Orr holds in such contempt, he probably takes two or more strokes off his handicap.

Anyone who has played golf for 35 years or more knows how radical was the change-over from hickory to steel shafts.

No two hickories were the same. Golfing axes of the period spent years collecting a set of hickory clubs with the correct "feel." Even then they got nothing to approach for uniformity the machine-made matched-set of today.

When I started playing golf I inherited a driver, with a slightly warped shaft, a huffy with a rounded sole that could be used to scoop the ball out of rabbit holes, a pipe brand cleek, the playing of which demanded an art all of its own; a mid-iron that was maid-of-all-works for straight forward middle-distance shots to the green, a long-soled lofting iron, for getting over bunkers, an ugly round-faced piece of metal that passed as a niblick, with which we strove brute-forcedly to whack an unresponsive gutty-ball out of knee high bents, or sleeper-faced traps like Hell at St. Andrews, the Cardinal at Prestwick or the Redan at North Berwick.

Of all the museum pieces perhaps the only one which survives in the odd bag of clubs is an old and trusted putter. I play with one which I believe to be over 60 years old and it seems to serve its purpose all right. So much so that I rather feel that the putt is the only shot in golf which has not altered over the years.

Indeed putting is 90 per cent psychology and, the rest probably luck.

When Tommy Armour, now the most sought-after golf teacher in the U.S., was an Edinburgh amateur, he was just about as miserable a putter as ever attained a low handicap.

I recall on one occasion in a North of Scotland tournament, Armour used three putters in consecutive rounds and did equally poorly with each of them. On the way home to Edinburgh Armour's train had to cross the famous Forth Bridge.

Armour knew the old superstition that it was considered lucky if one could throw a penny out of the train window into the water below without its striking one of the iron girders of the bridge. So he pulled out his three offending putters and hurled them one after another from the moving train.

In doing so Armour may have felt that he had purged the lumps of mischief from his putting by this action, for, shortly after, he left for America, and came back a few years later to win the British Open on the Carnoustie course whose greens had proved so worrying to him a few years previously.

But if putting is still the same in its technique as it has been for years, there is no doubt that everything else in golf has changed.

The modern player has, or should have, a fixed grooved swing for every shot. He should look at his score-card; measure the distance he needs to shoot, and in his bag he has the club which, if properly hit, will give him probably a ten-yard-length accuracy.

He is not called upon to make the exquisite mashie shot, played to the left of the pin to secure fade and consequent "stop" that was performed so magnificently by J. H. Taylor, Harry Vardon, Francis Ouimet, or even Bobby Jones in his earlier days of greatness.

Nor does he have to work on a four gutty-ball that may or may not fly true and on which he has to hammer his own dots and meshes to ensure a trajectory.

This does not mean of course that Ben Hogan, Sam Snead, Ed Furgol or Peter Thomson would not have been champions if they had lived and played along with Braid, Vardon, or Taylor, of the great triumvirate, but they would have had to learn a lot of old tricks, and they certainly would not have had electric caddy-carts to aid them in their senility.

But the youngsters don't need to worry. Nobody's going to turn back the clock, Harry Orr, I am afraid, will just have to put up with our "modern monstrosities."

League Suspends Stanky; 'Brat' Apologizes to Fans

ST. LOUIS (UP)—National League president Warren Giles said there was no evidence Tuesday that St. Louis Cardinals manager Stan Kraybill had turned down the St. Louis hearing earlier in the afternoon. Giles said the Cardinals' protest of last to indicate that Kraybill had Sunday's forfeited game, suspended Kraybill for five days, effective immediately, and fined him $100.

Stanky at once issued a public apology and said his days as baseball's "brat" were over.

Three from B.C. Among Qualifiers In West Amateur

SEATTLE, July 20 (UP)—A Seattle army major took medalist honors in the qualifying rounds of the 32nd annual Western amateur golf tournament today with a two over par 142 for 36 holes.

Major Harvey Williams carded one stroke more than defending champion Dale Morey, Indianapolis, but Morey, an automatic qualifier, was playing for fun.

Among 64 qualifiers for match play starting on Seattle's tough Broadmoor course tomorrow were Kevin Riley, Vancouver, 147; Lyle Crawford, Vancouver, 148; and Walt McElroy, Vancouver, 152.

Last night's Victoria score: Tyees 1, Senators 0.

Joe Nicholas, amazingly tardy in reporting to Victoria Tyees this season and notably ineffective during his brief stay with the club, set the Tyees down on five hits at Salem last night as he pitched the Senators to a 5-1 triumph.

Nicholas looked to be in his expected form as Ron Jackson, Don Pries and Dain Clay connected for singles in the opening inning to give the Tyees their only run. However, the slow-balling right-hander allowed only two hits the rest of the way—a single by Steve Mesner in the fourth and a double by Mel Stein in the seventh.

TIERNEY LOSER

Salem tied it up in the second inning and went ahead to stay with three runs off starter, and lower, John Tierney, in the fourth. Mike Kershaw came on for Tierney in the seventh and finished up.

Manager Pries and catcher Don Lundberg argued too strongly with the plate umpire in the seventh inning and both were ejected from the game.

One of the most publicized events in modern track and field history will be held on the final day of the British Empire Games at Vancouver when five of the top milers in the world match strides in what has been billed as the "dream mile." Roger Bannister of England and John Landy of Australia both have broken the four-minute barrier in recent weeks. Others who have a good chance of winning a gold medal are Chris Brasher of England, who paced Bannister to his 3:59.4 effort; Murray Halberg, the New Zealand flash who has run the mile in 4:4.4, and Chris Chataway, who paced both Bannister and Landy to their superb efforts.

Two world champions, both of them from Australia, huddle under a blanket at Vancouver following their arrival to the British Empire Games. They are Marjorie Jackson (left), holder of the 100 yards and 220 women's sprint records, and Jon Henricks, who holds the world's 110-yard long-course free-style record.

valuable players in the league turned in a brilliant four-game exhibition as the dog-tired Indians folded under incessant pressure.

Pilseers, determined to hold their third-place standing over the surging Nannaimo Native Sons, soared to a 5-3 half-time lead, then hustled to a seven-goal outburst in the third frame for a 12-3 lead.

The fast game, witnessed by 1,100 fans, was enlivened by a rousing fight between Pilseers' Fred Aspen and Indians' Bill Hannula.

In announcing the Shamrocks' lineup for tonight's game, McMillan said that big Norm Baker would be back in uniform and would start on one forward line with Jack Blonda and Jackie Northup.

Larry Booth will work between Whiting Severson and Archie Browning on another attacking unit while Harry Irwin will pivot the other forward trio, working with Bill Bamford and Al Gill.

Cagey Arnie Ferguson will team with Bob Monaghan to form one of the defensive units protecting goalie Gordie Johnston, while Nip O'Hearn and Jack Thompson combine as the other rear-guard duo.

Jack Sibbald is listed for utility duty.

Meanwhile, at Vancouver Forum last night, Pilseers snapped a disastrous four-game losing streak with one of their sharpest performances of the season, topping PNE Indians 14-7.

With members of the New Zealand and Hong Kong British Empire Games teams in the stands, Pilseers chopped Indians' victory streak off at seven games to even their bitter Inter-city Lacrosse League feud at four games each.

Cleveland Indians hung on for dear life last night to gain only a 16-inning 5-5 tie with the Boston Red Sox but also preserve an almost infinitesimal four percentage point lead in the American League pennant race.

Bobby Avila, more than anyone else, was responsible for the Indians' tie after the Yankees had beaten the White Sox, 4-1, in their game and were anxiously awaiting to take over the lead if the Tribe bowed to Boston.

Avila smashed his first homer in the first inning, then delivered a dramatic two-run homer with two out in the ninth off Willard Nixon to tie the game at 5-5. From that point on, neither team could score as Ray Narleski and Don Mossi held the Red Sox in check and Ellis Kinder and Sid Hudson did likewise against the Indians.

Cleveland's other two runs were the results of homers by Al Rosen and Larry Doby while Ted Lepcio homered for Boston.

New York Giants spurred to a seven-game lead in the National League pennant race by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 2-1, in the 13th inning while the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers bowed to the Chicago Cubs, 3-2, in 10 innings.

Two errors set the stage for the Giants' victory, which was credited to Johnny Antonelli, who went all the way.

ERROR HELPS CURS

A 10th inning error by relief pitcher Jim Hughes helped the Cubs to their victory over the Dodgers. Gene Baker, who scored all three of Chicago's runs, started the 10th with a double, then, with one out and Baker still on second, Hughes' error on a throw to first base allowed Baker to score.

Lefty Paul Minner went the distance for the Dodgers, giving up eight hits and recorded his eighth victory.

Mickey Mantle and Irv Noren drove in two runs to help the Yankees all but move into fashion for the last three days.

Trinidad Athletes Missing

From CP, UP Dispatches

VANCOUVER—Canada's British Empire Games team was at full strength, except for one member, at Empire Village Tuesday.

The final contingent, 45 boxers, wrestlers, weightlifters and fencers to complete the 200-member team arrived from Eastern Canada during the day.

Games manager Stanley V. Smith, along with the Vancouver police band, had a busy day. First they greeted the first arrivals at the Canadian National Railway station, and then a fast hop was made to the Canadian Pacific Railway station to greet the other train arrivals.

COTE MISSING

Missing was Gerard Cote of St. Hyacinthe, Que., famed marathoner, who is flying to Vancouver.

But Smith and his colleagues had one worry. The eight-member Trinidad team was missing.

It was scheduled to arrive on the train with the Canadian wrestlers and boxers, but failed to show.

Games and railway officials opened a search, but late in the day there was no record of the missing athletes.

TOP OFFICIALS HERE

To direct the pre-game training of the Canadians came Hy Henschen, general manager of the Canadian squad, and Charlie Wayland, secretary, from Montreal.

A seven-man South African boxing team also arrived Tuesday.

Earlier at city hall, 40 South African athletes presented Mayor Fred Hume with a plaque from the mayor of Johannesburg.

Death Ruled Accidental

A coroner's jury took less than five minutes yesterday to return a verdict of accidental death in the case of 76-year-old Miss Priscilla Smith, 1024 McClure, Victoria's third traffic victim in 1954.

The elderly woman died July 16 in Royal Jubilee hospital, more than two weeks after she received a fatal injury when she was struck by a car while crossing Broad Street at East Fort Street.

A witness to the accident identified Angus de Ruyter, 31, as the driver of the car.

Joseph G. Bennett, 308, coroner, said the woman was crossing Broad Street in the crosswalk with the green light.

The witness said the car was moving at a fast rate from East onto Broad Street and had to be stopped by the coroner.

Witnesses testified that the car was going at a fast rate when it struck the woman.

On the evening of the accident, the coroner's jury was asked to return a verdict of accidental death.

Win, Place and Show for Oak Bay High

Canadian diplomatic service is the goal of Tim Williams, 16-year-old Oak Bay High School student who led B.C. junior matriculants with 96.8 per cent. He's working at the Moore-Whittington lumber mill this summer before going to college.

Second only to classmate Tim Williams in standings was Jeremy Winter, who averaged 94.6 per cent. The 16-year-old hopes to become a doctor of medicine and is spending this summer as a car-hop at the Monterey Restaurant.

Underdog about her future is Gail Stott, 17, another Oak Bay High student, who was third in B.C. with 94 per cent. She's working in the summer school library and thinks she may become a teacher or enter one of the sciences.

Oak Bay Students Sweep Top Places In Junior Matric

A trio of Oak Bay High School students has won top standing in this year's university entrance examinations, according to results announced yesterday by the education department.

Highest standing for the entire province was made by Timothy Angus Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Williams, 1986 St. Ann Street, who chalked up an average of 96.8 per cent.

The 16-year-old student was from at Oak Bay schools. He also attended schools in Esquimalt and Victoria before attending Oak Bay High. He is the oldest of three children in the family and has two sisters.

An all-round student, he won honors on the school's track and swimming teams and was an assistant editor of the school paper, the "Oak Bay News".

He plans to continue his studies at college here and then enter the diplomatic service.

Jeremy Winter was born in Dunsmuir. He is working as a car-hop at the Monterey Restaurant for the summer. He hopes to become a doctor of medicine.

Miss Stott was born here and attended her elementary schooling at Margaret Jenkins school. A woman of academic prizes in the past, she has also won honors for piano study and singing. She is a member of the YMCA swimming club and holds the championship for her age group. She is 17.

Miss Stott was editor of the Oak Bay High newspaper. During the summer she is working at the Moore-Whittington lumber mill.

Education officials say that candidates who failed to pass the required examinations will be permitted to re-examine in the fall.

Each of the four students received a $250 St. James' Foundation scholarship and a $250 general proficiency scholarship from the University of B.C.

Winning these scholarships does not prevent the students from competing for one of the two $2,000 university entrance scholarships.

An announcement concerning these scholarships will be made by the education department at a later date.

Protest to CPR:

Give Service Or Clear Out

The Sidney Chamber of Commerce has called upon the CPR either to give service on the Sidney-Vancouver ferry run or else take its boat off and let another company take over.

"We aren't satisfied with the CPR service at all and we intend to do something about it," J. G. Mitchell, chairman of the business men's committee of the Sidney Chamber, told the Colonist last night.

The chamber has already written a letter of protest to William Manson, vice-president of the CPR western division, and has asked the Victoria Chamber to support its protest.

The Princess Klame presides over a round trip daily between Vancouver and Sidney departing from Sidney about 6:15 p.m. each day.

"They don't advertise the run and they try to send passengers to Nanaimo instead of Sidney," Mr. Mitchell charged. "I don't know why they do this. But if they are prejudiced against Sidney, why don't they give up the run and let another company run it?" he added.

"I think they just keep the boat on to keep anyone else from operating the service," he said.

"Somebody else could put on a ferry and make money," he said.

He felt the business could be kept in summer and show a profit in winter.

He also charged the CPR with discourteous handling of passengers on the run.

Petitioners Fear BCE Power-Line Means Huge Loss

Six hundred Saanich petitioners stand to lose nearly $500,000 if the B.C. Electric Co. runs overhead transmission lines from a proposed substation on Shelbourne Street, V. H. Clement told a Saanich meeting last night.

He estimated each petitioner would lose $750 on the value of his land. He was comparing the cost of running the lines with the cost of building a new substation.

FOR WOMEN

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

A trip to Salt Spring Island on their anniversary visit and that they could not do so, as well as a week of a different kind of life.

Incidentally, the Conservative Union from Victoria didn't cause much trouble at Salt Spring Island, thus the night of the "Beaver Point" road home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hepworth.

The little church, founded many years ago to promote the island, was filled to overflowing for the anniversary service. The loving care given by parishioners to the church through the years was in evidence for the Sunday afternoon service as the church was filled with bowls of lovely flowers from many of the island's gardens.

The Rev. Archbishop G. H. Holmes, pastor of the parish, took the service and was assisted by Rev. D. C. O'Connell of St. David's, the Sea, Courtenay Bay.

Bishop H. R. Ragg came from Victoria with Mrs. Ragg to preach the sermon for the day. A 60th anniversary is a great day in any parish, the Bishop said.

The Bishop left a sermon through with the congregation, at least it is a fact, he said, that it was admitted that those gathered there were being Christians today, but were going to be Christians on Wednesday and Christmas again a week from Friday. That is the real test of being a Christian.

As the visitors left the church, and there were many as a whole, there is an occasion on the island, there was a band, now guest book for them to sign. It was during this pleasant interlude that my newspaperwoman, again, received a rude shock.

On being introduced to a rather important person I said that we had met before in connection with club activities. I was politely told that she was of an old established family on the island and many people knew her when she had no idea who they were.

The guest book was the idea of Mrs. Roddis whose husband, Mr. A. E. Roddis, is warden of St. Mary's. The invitation for me to attend the ceremony also came from the Roddis.

It is well understood that there are many characters on Vancouver and Salt Spring Island, not Nancy Roddis, known the length and breadth of the province, she was decorated for her work in organizing the public health service in the Deane River Country.

Any cause that Nancy Roddis supports is supported and the fact that she and her husband have only been at Fulford for three years didn't deter her from entering into the preparations wholeheartedly.

Crossing back on the O. Beck on Monday evening I sat with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crofton, then, who when Mr. Crofton was in Salt Spring 34 years ago, told many interesting stories of the early days. They had only seen members

Tea Follows Ceremony At Fulford

Following the 60th anniversary service in St. Mary's church at Fulford Harbor on Sunday afternoon, the members of the Guild entertained the 95 members of the church and visitors at a tea held in the Beaver Point road home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hepworth.

Tea was served in the garden overlooking the swimming pool with Mrs. A. D. Dore presiding and the Guild assisting.

Members of the Guild assisting with the tea were Mrs. A. Davis, Mrs. J. Bryant, Mrs. A. Davis, Mrs. H. B. Dickens, Mrs. L. D. Drummond, Mrs. M. Gear, Evans, Mrs. F. L. Jackson, Mrs. A. O. Lacy, Mrs. K. Reithell, Mrs. W. Y. Stewart, Miss Lacy and Miss Gladys Shaw.

The decorations will be done by Mrs. E. J. Ashlee, Mrs. M. E. Fennell and Mrs. H. Rogers and the refreshments are to be arranged by Mrs. C. Wagg and Mrs. M. White.

GANGES. VICTORIA. BAY Circle of the W.A. met recently at the home of Mrs. R. T. Meyer and Miss Dorothy Mickle.

Hummel Figures Appear as Lamps

Winsome little Hummel figurines have long been popular as gift items. Now the figurines have been made into lamps, complete with shades and bases.

In the same store I found an unusual serving aid that would appeal to any hostess. It is a revolving wheel mounted on a stand, something like a water wheel, containing three good-sized dishes which swing around as the wheel is turned. They're fixed so they stay upright of course.

I thought it was silver, but the owner of the shop told me that it is hand-wrought aluminum. It sells for $12.50.

FOR FRUIT ARRANGEMENT. An attractive summer centerpiece would be a wrought iron basket lined with colorful fruit.

A large basket with matching candlesticks is priced at $8.50, and what surprised me was the lightness of the pieces. I always thought iron should be heavy.

Five pieces of Limoges china are expensive but use as can be. Hostesses are tiny hostesses sets plate and saucer all in one with a cup the size of the tip of your finger sitting on the saucer. Price is $1.39.

Little buckled shoes in dainty floral pattern are 95 cents each, small jugs are $1.49, and miniature candlesticks, complete with china candle are 95 cents.

NIGHTIES IN PASTELS. Another item in which the store specializes are hand-smocked nightgowns for babies and not just in pink, blue, and white either. You can also choose from green, yellow, mauve, and aqua for $1.98. They're made of flannel by the way.

There are matching jackets trimmed with lace.

miscellaneous articles, ice cream and soft drinks by the Evening Women's Association was held recently in the Parish Room.

GANGES. The monthly meeting of the Salt Spring Island Women's Association was held recently in the Parish Room.

Final arrangements were made for the annual church fete which will be opened at 2 p.m. by Miss Kathleen Agnew on Wednesday, August 4, at Harbour House.

The WA's staff of fancy and plain needlework will be composed by Mrs. Stuart Bannister, Mrs. S. P. Beech, Mrs. C. W. Leggett and Mrs. A. R. Price.

Needlework knitted garments, novelties, by Vesuvius Bay Circle; parcel post, fish pond.

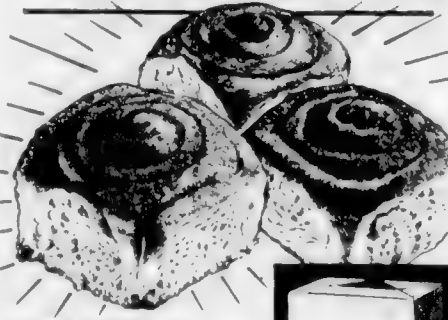

What kind of cover do you advise to wear with a pink all over pleated sheath with no sleeves and scoop neck?

The perfect answer for this type of summer dress is a matching or near matching sweater. This might be in a soft knit or if possible in cashmere. Choose a dressmaker style with a small collar rather than a classic cardigan and wear it open. A touch of leveling on the collar makes it more festive.

Our Insured Payment Plan permits small monthly payments for all funeral expense items.

Pesterer To Be Sentenced Today

Middle-aged Joseph Brailford of 1125 Burdett was remanded in custody until this morning for sentence after he pleaded guilty before Magistrate H. C. Hall in city court yesterday to following a city woman between June 22 and July 11.

She said he continued to pester her after she went to his wife and asked he be kept away.

The complainant said she is happily married, and met Brailford and his wife when she went to dances with her husband.

She told the court that Brailford's attentions were causing her health to suffer.

The woman said he came into her place of business about 6 p.m. several nights during the time and said "I will get even with you yet."

The complainant said he kept asking her to go out with him, and accused her of having "affairs with other men."

She told court that one night he followed her into her garage when she was about to drive a friend to the boat. He caught her hand as she sat in her car, and only released her when she threatened to run the car into him.

Brailford, who said he went dancing twice a week, learned he had danced with the complainant and she had not resented his attention.

He said that on another occasion the woman went for a car ride with him and his wife.

Alfred Chard of Tockway Drive was fined $5 for driving the wrong way on a one-way

Islanders Presented With Wings

The possibility of having Ground Observer Corps posts manned around the clock was mentioned last night when 30 southern Vancouver Island residents were presented with wings.

In presenting the wings, which were the first to be issued by the military, Norman Johnston of Vancouver said:

"We have been fortunate in getting very capable observers. We still require many more however to have sufficient numbers to keep the posts manned for 24 hours a day if necessary."

He spoke of the importance of giving early warning of approaching planes.

The 30 recipients have been trained for at least six months and all have participated in one major exercise.

Regional supervisor for this area is Robert Moffatt of Bamerton who was the first to receive his wings last night. Mr. Moffatt has been instrumental in getting the posts organized and in training the personnel.

Winners of wings last night are given with the posts they man:

Mr. and Mrs. E. Kennedy, Leechtown; A. Lowe, corps observer, D. Duncan, J. Todd, J. Alexander, R. Hughes, Mrs. Ruth Hughes, Mrs. B. Alexander, Mrs. Sheila Moffatt, and R. Moffatt, Bamerton; D. Angus, corps observer, Malahat; Chabot, E. Gibson, corps observer, Shawigan; Lake, J. Guest, corps observer, Kapoor; K. Roach, corps observer, R. Atkinson, Victoria; J. Barnes, corps observer, Oak Bay; T. Kelway, corps observer, Mount Douglas.

Inner-Tube Sailors Spurn Rescue Bids

PORT HUENEME, Calif. (UPI) — The U.S. Coast Guard Tuesday reported six rollicking adventurers aboard the inner-tube raft "Rubber Bomb Sneaky" had given up their attempt to reach Catalina Island and were taken aboard two boats for return to the mainland.

The raft was located 12 miles from here. It was broken up by a coast guard cutter.

formed no help required. Still not satisfied that all was well, the Coast Guard sent a cutter to the scene. The adventurers got aboard.

The raft was made from 100 inner-tubes and some planks.

When the adventurers were found earlier Tuesday nearly 75 miles from Avalon, their Catalina destination, they insisted they were not in distress. They had expected to reach Avalon Monday and their families in Ventura, Calif., began worrying when "The Poor Man's Kon-Tiki" failed to arrive.

The raftsmen left Ventura Sunday and weren't seen again for 36 hours until the fishing boat Yellowtail spotted them. A Coast Guard plane also flew over the area but returned to its base when it was in-

INDO-CHINESE CEASE-FIRE STILLS WORLD WAR-GUNS

Cost High To France Only Rough Edges Remain On Cambodia Settlement

GENEVA (UP)—France and the Communists signed a cease-fire agreement for Viet-Nam and Laos early today to end nearly eight years of war in Indo-China.

A similar truce agreement for Cambodia, the third Indo-Chinese state, was to have been signed at the same time, but it was held up by last minute technicalities and the signing was delayed until this afternoon. The date on which the cease-fire will go into effect has not yet been disclosed. Commanders in the field will have to sign the documents first.

NEAR MISS

French Premier Pierre Mendes-France missed his midnight deadline for "peace with honor" by only two hours. He missed it by so little that he was not expected to carry out his threat to resign.

When the truce agreement goes into effect, the guns of war will be silent throughout the world for the first time in more than 17 years.

A spokesman said the cease-fire agreements come into force with the signing, but he was uncertain as to when the fighting would formally come to an end. Presumably the end would come as soon as word could be relayed to the troops in the field, a matter of three days in the Red River delta and up to two weeks in isolated districts.

COSTLY PEACE

For France, the achievement of peace was costly.

France agreed to the partitioning of strife-torn Viet Nam near the 17th parallel, gave up the rich and teeming delta area with its great cities of Hanoi and Haiphong, and turned over more than 12,000,000 natives to Red rule.

But Mendes-France, in his heading rush to end the hostilities within a month, salvaged the great Tonkin air and naval base and the ancient Annamese capital of Hue, well below the cease-fire line across the 40-mile waist of Viet Nam.

The effective date of the truce was not being announced immediately, western sources said, although it was being radioed promptly to the military commands in Indo-China. The blackout of the date was said to have been imposed to prevent possible uprisings or panic among Viet Nam civilians.

Last-minute snags in the Cambodian negotiations robbed Mendes-France of success by his deadline, but finally in the early morning hours it was announced that agreement in principle had been reached.

ROUGH EDGES STILL

The delegation leaders of France, Britain, Russia, Viet Nam and Cambodia huddled in emergency session at the British headquarters until after 1:30 a.m. (5:30 p.m. PDT). They hammered out a decision of sorts, with the rough edges still to be rasped off.

Finally they agreed to put off the signing of the Cambodian document until later today.

Immediately after that, the final full dress session of the Geneva conference will be held. The delegates will tie up the loose ends, and leave the final mop-up to secondary crews.

The agreements assured the end of a war which cost France and its associates 92,000 in dead and missing. In money it cost the West more than $5,000,000,000—over $2,500,000,000 of which came from the United States.

The United States held aloof from the final act in the Indo-China drama, not being a belligerent. But at the urgent behest of France not to wreck the showdown with the Reds, Washington sent Undersecretary of State Walter Bedell Smith to Geneva, and promised a commitment not to upset the Franco-Communist agreement by force or threat of force.

MAJOR DEFEAT

The French called it "peace with honor." But it set the seal on one of the worst defeats for the West at the hands of the Communists.

The signing took place in a conference room of the white marble Palace of Nations, the home of the late League of Nations.

Impact Powerful, Diplomats Feel

(From AP, UP Dispatches)

Pierre Mendes-France's Indo-China peace, achieved by sensationally unorthodox days, will make a powerful impact on East-West relations, Western diplomats agreed last night.

Early effects probably will be to win sympathy for Communist China, whose attitude made peace possible, an increase of "neutralism" in Europe and more support for Britain's lead in seeking armed but peaceful co-existence between East and West.

The French man on the street took the news calmly, with no parades, no flags and no more than the usual crowds around newstands. Parliament dined through a debate about cheese trademarks and cancer research.

Mendes-France may now make concessions to the United States, which stood aloof from the negotiations on West German rearmament and the European army.

Indo-China peace will mean a speedup of work on the projected Southeast Asia defense alliance.

Constable in Hospital

Officer's Attacker Jailed for Month

BY IAN MacDONALD

City policeman Ray Thomas lay in a Royal Jubilee Hospital bed last night wondering what doctors are going to do to repair his badly shattered nose.

The pain was concentrated on the left side of his face, for the fist that fractured his nose also completely closed his left eye.

He may also be suffering a skull injury.

Constable Thomas is the third city policeman to be assaulted while on duty during the last two months, and the most seriously injured.

Earlier in the day he heard Magistrate H. C. Hall sentence 30-year-old Robert Maltby of 878 Esquimalt Road to one month in jail for the attack.

Constable Thomas sat in the witness box facing his tall assailant, whose shirt and trousers were covered with blood, and told his story in a shaky voice.

TELLS OF CALL

He stated that at 1:30 a.m. Tuesday he responded to a call to 1332 Broughton Avenue where a man was reported to be bothering the residents.

"I checked the accused in his car outside and he gave me his identification," said Constable Thomas.

Beaver Quits Papers

LONDON (Reuters)—Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born newspaper magnate who built up "The Daily Express" from a small newspaper to one of Britain's most popular dailies, has relinquished control of it and its associated papers.

An announcement from The Express office said Tuesday night:

"Lord Beaverbrook has given a block of shares in the Express to the Beaverbrook Foundation which has been established as a British Empire educational trust."

"The newspapers have therefore passed out of his control," Lord Beaverbrook, born at Maple, Ont., is 75.

The newspapers he controlled include The Daily Express, with a daily circulation of more than 4,000,000; The Sunday Express, a national Sunday newspaper founded by him; The Evening Standard, a London evening paper; and the Glasgow Evening Citizen.

The Express, one of Britain's foremost journalistic exponents of Anglo-American harmony under Lord Beaverbrook's guidance pressed even more strongly for solidarity within the British Commonwealth and territories.

Lord Beaverbrook came to England from Canada in 1910 and formed the London Express Newspapers, Ltd., in 1915.

He bought control of the Daily Express in 1918 at a time when it was described by some people as "a rather shaky property" and by others as "moribund."

He lifted the paper from a loss of $200,000 a year to its present mammoth circulation. Striking success was also achieved with The Evening Standard and The Sunday Express.

More Flowers Needed Friday

Generosity of Oak Bay Gives Service Fine Start

A heart-warming response from Oak Bay gardeners made a fine success yesterday of the first collection and distribution of surplus flowers through the Colonist-organized "share-the-flowers" plan.

So great was the response that it was possible to deliver bouquets to patients in the Veterans' Hospital, Royal Jubilee Hospital and the Aged Women's Home.

Seth Halton, publisher of The Daily Colonist, said the first collection had more than achieved its goal by brightening a great many sick rooms in three institutions caring for the ill and infirm.

"We are grateful for the generous response from Oak Bay and hope that the people of Fairfield and James Bay will respond just as generously on Friday," he said.

Asia Bloc

LONDON (AP)—Premier Chou En-lai of Communist China called Tuesday night for a pan-Asian security bloc "to safeguard the collective peace of Asia."

Chou said in an interview with Morgan Phillips, Labor Party secretary, recorded in Geneva, that Asian nations should consult among themselves and assume "obligations mutually and respectively."

Chou aimed plainly at India with references to an "area of peace," a term often used by Prime Minister Nehru. He advocated a five-point Asian peace plan paralleling exactly the five points in the India-China pact on Tibet signed April 29.

Indo-China's Cease-Fire Pact Stills War Guns After 17 Years

Cambodia Truce Not Yet Settled

GENEVA (UP)—France and the Communists signed a cease-fire agreement for Viet Nam and Laos early today to end nearly eight years of war in Indo-China.

A similar truce agreement for Cambodia, the third Indo-Chinese state, was to have been signed at the same time but it was held up by last minute technicalities and the signing was delayed until this afternoon. The date on which the cease-fire will go into effect has not yet been disclosed. Commanders in the field will have to sign the documents first.

NEAR MISS

French Premier Pierre Mendes-France missed his midnight deadline for "peace with honor" by only two hours. He missed it by so little that he was not expected to carry out his threat to resign.

When the truce agreement goes into effect, the guns of war will be silent throughout the world for the first time in more than 17 years.

A spokesman said the cease-fire agreements come into force with the signing, but he was uncertain as to when the fighting would formally come to an end. Presumably the end would come as soon as word could be relayed to the troops in the field, a matter of three days in the Red River delta and up to two weeks in isolated districts.

COSTLY PEACE

For France, the achievement of peace was costly. France agreed to the partitioning of strife-torn Viet Nam near the 17th parallel, gave up the rich and teeming delta area with its great cities of Hanoi and Haiphong, and turned over more than 12,000,000 natives to Red rule.

But Mendes-France, in his headlong rush to end the hostilities within a month, salvaged the great Tourane air and naval base and the ancient Annamese capital of Hue, well below the cease-fire line across the 40-mile waist of Viet Nam.

The effective date of the truce was not being announced immediately, western sources said, although it was being radioed promptly to the military commands in Indo-China. The blackout of the date was said to have been imposed to prevent possible uprisings or panic among Viet Nam civilians.

Last-minute snags in the Cambodian negotiations robbed Mendes-France of success by his deadline, but finally in the early morning hours it was announced that agreement in principle had been reached.

The delegation leaders of France, Britain, Russia, Viet Nam and Cambodia huddled in emergency session at the British headquarters until after 1.30 a.m. (5.30 p.m. PDT). They hammered out a decision of sorts, with the rough edges still to be rasped off.

Defense Secretary Charles Wilson said the U.S. will not commit itself to defend the truce line.

"I asked him where he lived and he said right there. He got out of his car and started up toward the house and said, 'Come on in, I will show you.'"

The policeman said the accused rang the doorbell, and the door was opened by his wife from whom he has been separated for three months.

ARGUED OVER MONEY Maltby was told by his wife that she did not want to see him any more and they argued about the amount of money to be paid for the support of their child, said the officer.

He didn't like his final meal at a downtown hotel in Toronto. So his last shot was an attempt to buy the hotel in order to fire the chef.

"He's got enough money to do just that," said police, as the New York family led him away.

Outright Purchase Threatened

Toronto Escapes Rich American

TORONTO (CP)—A New York millionaire was taken home by his relatives Tuesday after threatening to carry out drastic changes in Toronto's city government.

His luxury car got him involved in a small property damage accident. He didn't like the way police spoke to him so he decided to run for mayor and fire the lot.

Patient police, who did not disclose his name, said he would have to become a property owner to hold civic office. So he said he would buy a large hotel.

For his mayoralty campaign, the man—who conducted his business clad in a sailor cap—said he would need the backing of the press. So he tried to buy The Telegram.

He didn't like his final meal at a downtown hotel in Toronto. So his last shot was an attempt to buy the hotel in order to fire the chef.

"He's got enough money to do just that," said police, as the New York family led him away.

All They Lacked Was Custard Pie

Gendarmes Face Keystone Tangle

PARIS (UP)—The events Tuesday night in the Rue de Beauce might have been lifted directly from one of Mack Sennett's Keystone Cops comedies.

The scenario: Jean Lafarge, bungling would-be bandit, rushed into a tiny restaurant waving a pistol and demanding, "Give me your money or I'll shoot."

Owner Marcel Renard refused. Lafarge, man of his word, fired. Renard slumped to the floor, a bullet wound in his neck.

Lafarge, man of action, raced into the street for a getaway. He failed to notice an approaching car, was knocked down—and out.

The driver, unaware of the holdup, called police. As they began investigating the accident, Rene Valjean rounded the corner into the Rue de Beauce, brandishing a pistol and chased by half a dozen citizens.

Valjean, hot-tempered lover, had brawled with his girl in another restaurant nearby, threatened everyone in the place with his gun before backing down the street in retreat.

Valjean backed into the swarming police and bystanders at the scene of the auto accident.

Confusion reigned. Galle tamers flared. The harassed cops ordered everyone at the scene held until they could untangle the tangled situation.

That made it a 90-minute feature production.
